DIY STYLE

FOSTER YOUR INNER ARTIST WITH LESSONS FROM A SEASONED PRO.

You don't need to sign up for summer camp to get your fix of arts and crafts. Some of Park City's most passionate artists, musicians and performers offer single- or multi-day workshops to fuel your creativity. But instead of tie-dye T-shirts and popsicle stick birdhouses, the fruits of your labor might turn into a life-long passion.

Become fluent in the universal language of song at the Granger School of Music. Choose piano, drums, guitar, voice or DJ lessons as instructors take you through the creative process of making music. Practice your new skills with fellow musicians on a fully equipped stage, or use your knowledge to write your own dramatic soundtrack.

If your world is a blank canvas, then The Paint Mixer is your colorful source of inspiration and entertainment. Armed with a paintbrush and step-by-step instruction, aspiring artists are given all the tools to create an acrylic masterpiece from scratch in under two hours. Overcome any "artist's block" with a glass of cabernet from the studio's wine bar (optional), and watch as your creativity comes to life on canvas (encouraged). Classes are offered daily and suited for large groups.

Since 1995, the Egyptian Theatre has been inspiring the next generation of thespians and stagehands to step into the spotlight with its YouTheatre program. The kid-focused classes delve into the world of performance art, letting students explore the dramatic arc of storytelling by manipulating a character's voice, movement and environment on stage. They'll hone their wit with comedy improv or audition for a role with an actual YouTheatre show, just a few of the youth programs available.

Leave it to Mother Nature to do all the prep work for a picture-perfect photo. Local photographers Jared and Trish McMillen, of McMillen Fine Art Photography, offer year-round workshops throughout the West for aspiring professional and recreational shooters. Travel with the duo to iconic locations like the Tetons or Zion or tour Park City's nearby landscape, and master the art of filters, composition and natural lighting. Classes max out at four students.
